It takes so long for a tree to grow
So many years of pushing the sky.
Long branches stretch their arms
Reach out with their wooden fingers.
Years drift by, fall like leaves
From green to yellow then back to green.
Since my grand dad was a boy
And then before his father's father,
There's been an elm outside our school
Its shadow long across our playground.
Today three men ripped it down.
Chopped it up. It took ten minutes.
