

The creature I hate most

Without going into any philosophical aspects of the topic. I must admit candidly that it is the cockroach that I hate most. A cockroach is the ugliest and most abominable creature I have ever seen.

A cockroach is a dark brown insect usually having six legs and three body parts. It is very ugly and has a nauseating appearance. It mostly lives in dark, dirty, dingy places which are most damp as in the kitchen and in drains.

If a cockroach crawls on the human body, the person concerned is startled and tries to shake it off his or her body as quickly as possible. Children and young women are particularly afraid of cockroaches.

A cockroach is a dirty creature. It creature. Innumerable germs and bacteria on its legs and spreads them on the eatables. In invades all kinds of establish in the kitchen.

It is said that the cockroach is one of the oldest creatures in the world. Over millions of years it has not evolved nor changed its shape. The scientists also believe that if unfortunately, nuclear war takes place, cockroaches may perhaps be the only creatures who may be able to survive.

It is because the cockroaches can live in dark places where air is scant. As darkness spreads at night, they come out of the holes and drains to feast on the crumbs and left out food pieces in the kitchen and fertility as they multiply at an alarming rate.
