Had any one retained a cool head, the figure, one cannot help thinking, might easily have been stopped. Two or three men acting in concert might have lifted it bodily off the floor, or have jammed it into a corner. But few human heads are capable of remaining cool under excitement. Those who are not present think how stupid must have been those who were; those who are reflect afterwards how simple it would have been to do this, that, or the other, if only they had thought of it at the time.

How happy is he born and taught
That serveth not another's will;
Whose armour is his honest thought
And simple truth his utmost skill!
Who envies none that chance doth raise
Or vice; who never understood
How deepest wounds are given by praise;
Nor rules of state, but rules of good;
This man is freed from servile bands
Of hope to rise, or fear to fall;
Lord of himself, though not of lands;
And have nothing, yet hath all.

Questions :

- 49) Who is considered as a happy man?
- 50) What is the armour of a happy man?
- 51) Whom does a happy man envy?
- 52) What does the poet mean by 'servile bands'?

■ Read the following passage and answer the questions :

[5]

There will be cost-gaps to be filled up, before the whole idea of recycling plastics will scale up, spread wide and pay for itself. And the gaps will have to be filled by the plastics industry in the form of a cess. After all, they enjoy a vast, prone market and it cannot be that their responsibility ceases at their gates. In Europe, the idea of Extended Producer Responsibility (EPR) is firmly taking root. Simply put, with EPR "responsibility for product is broadened beyond the emissions and effluents generated by the extraction or manufacturing processes, to the management of the product once it is discarded." In India, low costs of plastics have resulted in profligate use, growing markets and high profits. A disposal cost built into the product will deter irresponsible consumption. Concerned Indians must actively lobby for an EPR Act in India adapted from Europe's experience, which will levy a cess on the industry to pay for the initiatives that will make plastics environmentally manageable.

Questions :

- 54) What is the biggest hurdle in the idea of recycling plastics?

55) Which extra responsibility is given to the producers through EPR?

56) Which step will deter the irresponsible consumption of plastic?

57) What will make plastics environmentally manageable?

58) Find from the passage the synonyms for :

59) Read the following passage and make a précis. Give a suitable title :

[5]

Depression is a prevalent psychological disorder that affects people of all age groups, across the world. The depressed individual feels low and sad most of the time and nothing seems to lift his mood. Sadness is in the foreground of consciousness. If we examine depressive feelings deeply, at the root, there is hatred and anger. These feelings come up because one feels disappointed with oneself, with significant others or with the world in general. As these feelings are difficult to deal with, they are often suppressed. These repressed emotions find a way to direct their fury at the person and he becomes depressed. We must rely on the power within for cure. Call upon the greatest force that can heal depression, which is, love. Hatred and anger are overcome with love, and when we learn to love deeply, depression terminates. We need to forgive our own self, other people, the whole universe and develop a deep, encompassing love. It is important to acknowledge that no one, including ourselves, is inherently bad; people behave harshly because they have been traumatised. Pain makes people turn selfish, cold and unforgiving to protect themselves. Rather than dwelling on their dark side, we must focus on the potential light and goodness within them.
