Part-B (Reading)

2. Read the passage given below and answer the questions that follow: Children going to schools in the future will be educated in ways of using and understanding computers and robots. They will grow up and be able to take the new jobs, and no one will ever consider the old jobs or want them. Everyone will be glad to leave dull jobs and the dangerous jobs to robots. Still, there will be a 'transition period', a time between the present, when so many people are still in the old jobs, and the future, when everyone will be in the new jobs. The American people and perhaps, the whole world, will have to be patient and intelligent so that we can get through the transition period with as little trouble and unhappiness as possible. There is another problem that may confront us.

- (i) Write the name of the chapter and of its author. 2
- (ii) What is a transition period ? 1
- (iii) How can we deal with the transition period ? 1
- (iv) How will children be educated in the future? 1
- (v) Give the meanings of any two of the following in simple English: 1 confront; trouble ; glad.

Part-C (Writing)

4. Make a precis of the following passage and give it a suitable heading. 5

The great advantage of early rising is the good start it gives us in our day's work. The early riser has done a large amount of hardwork before other men have got out of bed.

In the early morning the mind is free and work done at that time is generally well done. In many cases the early riser also finds time to take some exercise in the fresh morning air the exercise supplies him with a fund of energy that will last until the evening. By beginning so early, he knows that he has plenty of time to do thoroughly all the work he can be expected to do and is not tempted to hurry over any part. All his work being finished in good time, he has a long interval of rest.

And

He gets to sleep several hours and rises early next morning in good health and spirit for the labours of a new day.
