

The Elephant and The Tailor

Once an elephant lived in a village. He got in friendship with a tailor. The elephant used to go to a river for a bath. After drinking water and taking a bath it would pass by a tailor's shop and the tailor would give it something to eat .

One day the tailor was in an angry mood due to quarrel with his one of the customer. The elephant then came as usual. Instead of giving anything to eat, he pricked the elephant's trunk with his needle. The elephant felt agonized with pain. He made up his mind to teach a tailor a lesson.

He went to the river, had his bath and then filled up its trunk with muddy water. He stopped at the tailor's shop and threw in all the muddy water on the garments in the shop. The clothes were spoiled with mud. The tailor suffered a great loss. He felt sad for his misdeed. But it was too late.

Moral: tit for tat.