

A House, A Home

A house is made of brick and stone and hard wood. It includes glass windows and very often a yard. There are a few other things also like the tiled floors, plastered walls and many doors.

However, all these things do not really make a home. It is a loving family which makes a real home. In such a family people care for each other and work unselfishly.

Home means love and family. It means to work for the happiness of all those who live in the house i.e., brothers, sisters as well as parents. For the welfare of the family, each member has to work unselfishly. They are kind to each other and share the happiness and the misfortunes together. The members of a happy home care for each other. They show it by their actions that they love.
